

Sykes-Picot Scheme of Separation Plunging Africa into More Turmoil's and Anarchy

News:

As of March 30, 2025, South Sudan faces escalating political tensions and violence, threatening the fragile peace established by the 2018 agreement. The arrest of First Vice President Riek Machar in late March has intensified fears of a return to civil war. Machar's detention, along with that of his allies, has led his party to declare the peace deal collapsed, citing a lack of political goodwill towards peace and stability.

Comment:

It is well known the United States pushed the implementation of the separation of Southern Sudan and the establishment of a state in it. The US created a separatist movement called the Sudan People's Liberation Movement in 1983, led by its agent, John Garang, to work to contain all the rebels and their movements in a single movement. Furthermore it is indeed America who brought the former Sudanese President Omar al-Bashir into power in 1989, and asked him to concentrate its influence in the country, and then to implement the idea of separating the South.

Notably, Sudan both North and South became a settlement of U.S. influence with Europe particular British because of its influence in the former Sudan and their agents there, has kept trying to intervene whenever possible, to regain its influence in Sudan, or at least to share with America, even a little influence there.

In this regard, the rivalry between Western puppets i.e. President Salva Kiir (a Dinka) and former Vice President Riek Machar (a Nuer) has seen South Sudan in turmoil. The country is deeply divided along ethnic lines, particularly between the Dinka and Nuer communities. The Nuer White Army (a tribal militia) recently attacked government forces in Nasir, leading to mass displacement. All the resolutions reached between the two rivals such as Addis Ababa Peace Accord have been breached, which has turned the country more chaotic. This rivalry between Kiir and Machar is due to struggle of interest between the foreign powers who are the key players with vested interests in South Sudan. Their interest is all about plundering resources including oil.

The whole concept of separation is the colonialist kuffar's schemes to tear our countries apart. Africa a home to a number of separatist movements must realize that through separation it will end herself into civil wars. A South Sudan should serve as an open evident of the danger of this colonialist plot. The colonialists have now engaged into a new plan for to separate Darfur. The African intellectuals and the ummah at large should stand firmly against the plots of the colonialist Western powers, especially America, and to restrain those politicians who have put themselves into yoke of capitalists and are carrying out their conspiracies against our land.

It is through the Khilafah Rashidah, Rightly Guided Caliphate on the method of the Prophethood that will unify our lands and will rid our lands completely of any agent or handler that dealt with our lands. Bringing anyone who sold our lands for worldly gains to account. Only the Khilafah can unify us against the enemy and we can then watch their downfall.
