Mohammad Bin Salman delivers the Uyghur Muslims to their Oppressors

«إِنَّ شَرَّ الرِّعَاءِ الْخُطَمَةُ»

“The worst of rulers are those who treat their subjects harshly.”

Mohammad Bin Salman seeks various ways to stay in power no matter what it requires of betrayal to Allah and His Messenger and the believers. After being exposed in the murder of journalist Jamal Khashoggi and the rising number of calls for his accountability and his removal from office, he took several steps to prove his allegiance to the colonial West. Inside Saudi Arabia, he opened the door widely to an intensive campaign to spread obscenity and immorality, under the guise of promoting tourism and entertainment, and brought singers and artists of vice from the Arabs and non-Arabs to perform immoral concerts, at the same time, he detained hundreds, rather thousands of Muslims in prisons.

Bin Salman is working hard to boast his image before the international public opinion, this is by signing trade deals with many countries in a bid to spread the message that the work is proceeding to achieve his project called "Vision 2030". After the assassination of Khashoggi had cast its shadow over the Saudi Investment Conference (on 23/10/2018, dubbed Davos in the Desert, it lost its luster due to the withdrawal of many international dignitaries and businessmen), he went on a tour of Pakistan, India, China and Indonesia, that witnessed the signing of many deals worth tens of billions of dollars.

In his visit to China, Bin Salman not only signed the deals but gave the Chinese authorities the green light in their brutal campaigns against the Uyghur Muslims in East Turkestan (Xinjiang). The New York Times quoted the Chinese television channel (CCTV) saying that Bin Salman said during his meeting with Chinese President Xi Jinping: “China has the right to take anti-terrorism and de-extremism measures to safeguard national security.”

While the international media have condemned China's crackdown on East Turkestan's Muslims, Ibn Salman's statement justified these brutal crimes. Thus, he proved himself to be a partner of the Chinese authorities in their crimes, and testified against himself that he is from the Sufaha' (impudent) who the Messenger of Allah (saw) warned of them. It was narrated that Jaber bin Abdullah said: the Prophet (saw)
